"Should I Become an Accountant?" Highlights Current Issue of New Accountant Magazine

"Build up a body of knowledge, which will eventually lead to the ability to make informed decisions and move up the ladder."

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS (PRWEB) FEBRUARY 03, 2016

New Accountant Magazine, a trusted professional journal for college accounting students since 1985, has released its latest issue, available both in print and online.

This issue of New Accountant focuses on reasons to become an accountant, various career paths for accounting professionals, and a glimpse into understanding the basics of the profession.

"New Accountant provides crucial information to students aspiring to be accounting professionals. It prepares them to take the CPA exam, embark on the job hunt all while offering various skills they may need going forth," says Steven Polydoris, New Accountant Editor & Publisher.

The featured cover story, "Should I Become an Accountant?" is written by a group of professionals: Nabeel Iqbal (Tax Accountant), Brenden Kassel (Tax Accountant), Joseph Savoca (Tax Accountant), Robert Sheppard (Audit Senior), and Chaand Vora (Staff Accountant) under the guidance of Chris Roberts (Director of Human Resources) and Teresa Hansen (Senior Marketing Associate) at WeiserMazars, LLP, Long Island.

This article dives into the lives of real accountants, providing readers with skills they may need in the world of accounting. Author Chaand Vora (WeiserMazars Staff Accountant) offers a tip to readers, "It is crucial to ask questions, make notes and learn from each new experience in order to build up a body of knowledge, which will eventually lead to the ability to make informed decisions
