Megaprojects Series:
Long Island City's Hunter's Point South
By Arthur J. Adams Jr.

Anyone who has traversed the 59th Street Bridge (also known as the Ed Koch Bridge) can't help but notice the massive change on the Long Island City waterfront over the past few years. The one-time urban blight of industrial factories and junkyards now competes with Manhattan for majestic skyline views on the shores of the East River, as New York City converts old manufacturing space to affordable high-rise residences, retail space, and parks.
